(CNN) -- Much of the west coast is covered in sea ice, and even inland, the ice is very thick. But while much of the country is struggling to cope with record cold, parts of the United States are seeing record heat. This is not the normal summer weather for most of the country. And it has put a spotlight on the record-breaking hot and dry conditions. You might have seen the graphs showing how much water is stored in our reservoirs and aquifers. The amount of snowmelt in the West is causing the largest deluge, and it is certainly helping to keep temperatures down. But much of the east is also feeling the effects of the hot, dry weather.

Heatwave in US Nearly 90% of the contiguous United States, from the south of Georgia to the north of Alaska, is experiencing a heatwave. "I was on a plane and I saw that we were talking to that part of the country, and it was below the Arctic Circle. That's not normal," said CNN meteorologist Bill Phillips. The entire state of Texas is experiencing heat and drought. "There's a lot of areas in the south that are experiencing near-record heat, and you don't see those kinds of records on a regular basis," said Phillips. "It's going to be a very hot and dry summer in the west, and it
