In view of the promising anticancer activity of bis(9-amino-9-bromo-10,11-dihydro-methylanthracene) (NSC 632138) and its putative active metabolite bis(9-amino-9-bromo-10,11-dihydro-methylanthracen-10-yl)methane (NSC 632144), which have been shown to produce marked myelosuppression in mice, the plasma concentration-time profile of the two metabolites was studied in humans following oral administration of either 75 mg/m2 of NSC 632138 or 7 mg/m2 of NSC 632144. The concentration-time profile in the 7 mg/m2 group was characteristic of a biotransformation product, while in the 75 mg/m2 group the concentration-time profile showed the characteristics of a metabolite with a long elimination half-life and a volume of distribution similar to that of a rapidly excreted parent drug. {{ $header }} Dashboard id]) }}">{{ $version->name }} 2d92ce491b
