Lawmakers on Thursday passed a far-reaching bill to slash legal immigration by ending a lottery system that admits people based on random chance, and also to block President Obama's executive action on immigration. The House passed the legislation early Thursday morning, just one day after they passed it in a 227-186 vote. Obama has threatened to veto the bill, a move that would require a veto-proof majority to prevent the bill from becoming law. ADVERTISEMENT The $583 billion bill reduces the number of green cards and permanent residence cards the federal government gives out every year, which would result in fewer jobs for immigrants and would make it harder for them to become citizens. The legislation would also end a lottery system that allocates visas based on random chance, and raises the minimum salary for those who want to work and come to the U.S. from $60,000 to $100,000. Immigration and business groups have criticized the legislation, saying it would force businesses to cut back on hiring or be left with fewer employees and fewer customers. GOP leaders have said their goal is to pass the bill through the Senate this summer. House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) released a statement saying that the bill will create "more obstacles to legal immigration. "By increasing wages and barriers to entry, this legislation would reverse the trend of allowing more workers from all over the world to come to America and fill the jobs Americans need. This legislation is shameful and the bill is dead on arrival in the Senate," she added. Still, Republicans say they are confident that they have enough votes to pass the legislation, pointing to their successful efforts to repeal ObamaCare and pass the $1.5 trillion omnibus in March. "In March, the House passed a budget, and two months later, the Senate passed a budget," Speaker Paul Ryan Paul Davis RyanAt indoor rally, Pence says election runs through Wisconsin Juan Williams: Breaking down the debates Peterson faces fight of his career in deep-red Minnesota district MORE (R-Wis.) said Wednesday. "We're not going to be able to pass another omnibus and get nothing done until we have some accountability
