Repression of aldosterone in isolated human mitochondria by cyclic GMP and guanosine 5'-diphosphate. Isolated human mitochondria contain adenosine 3':5'-monophosphate-dependent mitochondrial RNA polymerase (mt-RNA pol I) activity; when this activity is assayed in the presence of exogenous GTP, aldosterone repression is observed. In the absence of exogenous GTP, aldosterone repression is still present, but the extent of repression is reduced. These results show that adenosine 3':5'-monophosphate-dependent mt-RNA pol I can function as a simple mt-RNA pol I in the absence of GTP but that in the presence of exogenous GTP, it becomes an enzyme that specifically inhibits aldosterone secretion.Q: Unable to install proxycommand-curses I am trying to install the proxycommand-curses package (for compiling c-src programs on a linux box over a http proxy).
