So, if you are using an ARM device with a PIC16F2050, I know the C50 MCU is not a 32-bit part but rather a 20 bit. I have seen many posts with firmware with this problem without the .Q: My dynamically generated table is partially blank I am trying to display in the table, and have the results generated dynamically, although the problem is that it fills partially the table. Any help would be appreciated the result of the script look like: A: If you open your browser's developers tool you will see that the table is not in but in ; try putting them all in the same div. A consideration of ethics in marine science and policy: two countries, two perspectives Abstract: Despite the fact that marine science and marine policy often compete for scarce resources, for instance with respect to marine conservation and exploitation, they have a shared interest in maintaining the public's trust. This interest is best taken into account by a philosophy of science that puts a high value on the free and critical exchange of ideas, but a limited value on the neatness of any theory that is to be tested. A clear division between scientific and policy concerns is not a good basis for such a philosophy of science. Scientists and
