What's New In?

Flexible Album Studio is the newest album creation software on the market. It allows you to upload a folder of pictures to your website and create a truly flexible album to share them with your family and friends. In an online magazine listed under "Links" on the web page for Nuevo Laredo, Tamaulipas, a Mexican photographer has shared several striking photos of interiors and exteriors of buildings in the city that have been burned and destroyed. As Market Watch put it, the images "were captured by someone who appears to be very familiar with the structures and their former condition." This person "wiped out" all the images of buildings on their property by blurring and whitening all images in each image gallery. The photographer has not been identified, but their images have been shared across the internet. At the time of this publication, the images below show the following locations: First floor of the "Casa de la Vida," a Pawn shop — Previously owned by "Rolando Ruiz," a local businessman and alleged MS-13 member. The interior walls have been removed. Second floor of a building. The windows have been covered with plywood. Third floor of a building where a sign advertises "casas de amigos" — Literally "neighborhood houses" (click on image to enlarge): Second floor of a building is askew. The top portion of the roof is off. First floor of a building with missing windows. Entrance to an unknown building. Second floor of a residence. The property was labeled a "house of love" in the book, "Nuevo Laredo, Tamaulipas" by Ricardo Chávez Silva. Some of the walls are removed but the upper half of the roof remains. The light blue marks appear to indicate where both glass and metal is still present in the image.
