Organized as a not-for-profit, the EEA offers a number of blockchain-related resources including certification programs, open source contributions, and a platform for network governance. The business network aims to empower enterprises and other organizations by connecting them to the EEA community. It is said to address problems associated with growing real-world blockchain adoption and validation, as well as the possibility of centralization through a central government. Marketing and communications lead at the EEA Caitlin Long said the group is "working on other ways" to address the blockchain community's lack of diversity. The EEA in 2015 released the "Principles of Permissioned Distributed Ledger Technology," which lays out the framework for real-world DLT governance. In addition, the organization established a public membership program for projects and organizations to validate their blockchain platforms. In June, the EEA announced its Universal Ethereum Explorer, which features an open source web interface for accessing information about EEA member projects. Consensus 2018 was co-organized by the EEA along with the Enterprise Ethereum Alliance (EEA), Consensys, and Enterprise Ethereum Working Group (EE WG). It featured more than 1,400 attendees and 175 speakers representing 25 countries. The EEA's platform, token sale, and the Universal Ethereum Explorer have all been developed at the EEA's Toronto, Canada location.Q: pandas: group by with values from list and sum Suppose I have a list of vals: data = ['apple', 'oranges', 'apples', 'pears', 'oranges', 'apples', 'apples'] 570a42141b
