A full-length cDNA encoding tomato triose-phosphate isomerase (TPI) was isolated using the RACE technique. The sequence was contained in a probe of a tomato-specific cDNA library. Analysis of the deduced amino acid sequence shows a close relationship between tomato TPI and other plant TPI proteins. The TPI mRNA was preferentially expressed in mature green fruits, and was detected as early as 2 weeks after anthesis, suggesting a possible role of TPI in fruit ripening.Q: A generic class throws if I use the GetHashCode() method, the list throws an exception if the key is a primitive type. If I use the GetHashCode() on a value type returns a hash code that is the same as the default struct hash code. But the list you describe can't be indexed by a key that is a value type. Only key value pairs can be placed in a collection, and the hash code is computed from the value of a key. Therefore, you don't want value types as keys in your generic list. It's the same reason we don't use value types as keys in a dictionary or as keys for a list of structs. A: The behaviour you describe is because the underlying hash function only has a single state. 82138339de
