The appellant had no part in the subsequent examination which was made by Dr. Wesley, who reported that the appellee had suffered from no disability and was fit to do general labor. 3 Upon being so informed, the appellant, then on February 26, 1953, wrote to Dr. McLaurin advising him that the appellant desired to be relieved of any liability to the appellee arising out of the accident, and that the appellant was willing to pay the appellee an amount equivalent to the sum of $65.00 per week until he (the appellee) was able to obtain work of the same character as his former employment as it could be obtained within a radius of twelve miles from his home.
