Sometime between the end of last year and early this year, Marvel's big Avengers: Infinity War trailer was snuck onto the internet by mistake. The clip was on display at the premiere for director Anthony Russo's Captain America: The Winter Soldier earlier this year, though Marvel quickly removed it. But on Facebook, it's lingering around. The most obvious giveaway is that Thanos is playing a big role in the trailer, but there are a few other hints, too. Captain America's back on the big screen in this final showdown between the superheroes, there's a third Infinity Gauntlet, and there's some chatter about previous timelines and how each scenario line up with the Mad Titan's arrival. It's a lot to digest, so here's everything you need to know: The Avengers: Infinity War Trailer Is (Sorta) Free Much like the teaser trailer for Captain America: The Winter Soldier, the full trailer from Avengers: Infinity War was posted to Facebook's public page over the weekend — but rather than earn you a few extra points for watching it, the full movie is free (and running into the late hours of today). Marvel's announcement was buried under an unrelated post talking about charity car wash events, so it took a couple hours for people to pick up on it. The effect is something similar to the Magic Leap virtual reality events that are popping up all over the country, but this trailer's a lot shorter. It looks to be around 50-60 seconds long, and according to Marvel, it's "a teaser, to be exact." If you're in need of a refresher, then this is probably the best way to see the whole movie for free. The Full Trailer Shows Thanos Opening the Infinity Gauntlet Again Image: Facebook / Marvel Studios Right off the bat, you can see Thanos' mass-murderous demeanour in this trailer. The purple-skinned villain opens up the gauntlet in this shot, and it's almost like he's speaking directly to the camera. That's a pretty epic reveal, so it makes sense that Marvel would want to make sure you saw it. But a little after that, Thanos has opened the gauntlet again, as Captain America takes a shot at him in this shot. The hint at the

Up to three midwives practice in NSW per delivery ward. The midwives provide comprehensive care for mother and baby at each birth. The midwives assess, support, and monitor the labour and birth of women at all stages of pregnancy. Some NSW midwives provide services in maternity wards within hospitals, and others provide services to women at home. These services include the care of women at risk of a preterm birth; assistance with the management of pain and anxiety at each stage of labour; and postnatal monitoring of the newborn. The midwives can also provide support and assistance for women trying to conceive. NSW midwives are assigned to work with women at risk of preterm birth. These include women with pre-eclampsia, hypertension and diabetes, women with early pregnancy loss, and women who have multiple pregnancy losses. Women who need the services of a midwife after childbirth also receive care. I think if you look at the video through the eyes of a Baby Boomer, you'll understand that the shot was perfect. The 56-65 rule of thumb comes from the fact that the Baby Boomers (including me) have a standard length of 17 years. As soon as the editor of this video saw the shot, he knew that it was exactly enough video to meet the rule of 17 years. The reason why he does this is because he edits down 17 years of video to just one minute. He would not be allowed to show you the 17 years of video unless you were purposely trying to learn how to edit. The 76-85 rule of thumb is a bit more common. This is based on the general guideline that the average adult (including all of us Baby Boomers) lose a year of years to death, and another year of years to retirement. So if we take the 17 years of video and subtract the one minute of video, we come up with a minimum of 17 years of video to "make" that one minute of video. I knew the rules were applicable, but I had to search for them. I see
