Jeux de Ludo-Vie.Q: Javascript checking if one function ended, and calling another So, I have a game concept with a finish screen that pops up when I reach the final level of a game. What I'm trying to do is check if a previous function ended and, if so, make another function appear. So far I can only get the function to display when I refresh the page, and I'm not sure if I should be using a stack or simply re checking functions and if the function is finished call the next function that will run. Here's the code:

var started = false; var gotToFinish = false; var question1 = document.getElementById("question-1"); var question2 = document.getElementById("question-2"); var question3 = document.getElementById("question-3"); var question4 = document.getElementById("question-4"); function checkIfFinished() { if (question1.checked === true && started === false) { document.getElementById("finish-1").style.visibility = "visible"; started = true; return; } else if (question2.checked === true && started === false) { document.getElementById("finish-2").style.visibility = "visible"; started = true; return; } else if (question3.checked

=== true && started === false) {
  document.getElementById("finish-3").style.visibility =
  "visible"; started = true; return; } else if (question4.checked === true && started === false) {
  document.getElementById("finish-4").style.visibility =
  "visible"; started = true; return; } } Any help would be appreciated. I'm fairly new to Javascript. A: Check if one of the prev questions was not answered, than try again var
  started = false;
