Unfortunately for me, the Pirate game is the last scheduled game on the Dodgers schedule for the year. Lucky for me my roommate already bought my season ticket, so I will have access to everything I wanted to see [...] It was a good weekend. It was also a busy weekend for me. I made plans with a few friends to go to the UT/WvN game on Saturday and the UNLV basketball game on Sunday. Then on Sunday morning I had a lecture to attend to. So on Sunday I came home to the Dodgers game [...] My brother in law, who recently returned from Afghanistan, was the best man at our wedding. To study the role of estrogen receptors (ER) in ovarian physiology and pathogenesis, we examined whether ER-alpha and ER-beta, which are ligand-inducible transcription factors, are expressed in three human ovarian epithelial cell lines, in one immortalized ovarian surface epithelial cell line, and in primary ovarian surface epithelial specimens. The cell lines included the human granulosa cell line (KGN); the human granulosa cell line (COV318), and the human granulosa cell line (COV434). The primary cultures included ovarian surface epithelium, and a sample of ovarian tissue as the control. ER-alpha expression was detected by Northern blot hybridization and immunocytochemistry. ER-beta expression was detected by Northern blot hybridization. The density of ER-alpha messenger RNA transcripts was highest in the human granulosa cell lines KGN and COV434, but was low or undetectable in COV318 and in the primary cultures. In KGN cells, ER-beta transcripts were detected. Ovarian surface epithelium and ovarian tissue stained with anti-ER antibody. We also performed in situ hybridization using oligonucleotide probes for ER-beta. In KGN cells, ER-beta expression in the nuclei of most cells was nuclear but cytoplasmic staining was also detected. The human ovarian cell lines express ER-alpha and ER-beta. KGN cells may represent one the cell types of the granulosa cell lineage, and may provide a useful model for understanding hormonal regulation of human granulosa cells in vitro. $G_{\lambda}$ with bond graph $G_{\rho}$.
