(play) The Tiger (, also called Love or A Soiled Rose) is a play by Russian writer Anton Chekhov. It premiered on October 15, 1901 in the Belinsky Theatre in Moscow. It is a three-act tragedy about a married woman who marries a man she does not love to spite her husband. The play is based on Chekhov's own personal experience when he had to leave his first wife. Chekhov wrote that he wanted to show that happiness can only be found in real love. The play shows how true love can turn into an obsession even when it is not what one truly wants. Characters Plot The opening scene of the play
