Im currently using ajax to upload the data. I know its possible to flip the entire object but i dont know how? A: Sure you can, but you have to send the data back in the form of JSON. Example: var exampleObject = { name: 'John', age: 34 }; $.ajax({ type: 'POST', url: '/path/to/your/webservice', data: JSON.stringify(exampleObject), success: function(result) { // on success }, error: function() { // handle error }, dataType: 'json' }); You will receive the data in the AJAX's success callback (result) containing the data that your backend service returns. A: Never mind, I figured it out. I just wrote the file in javascript and posted it via AJAX. var object = []; for (var i = 0; i by Alexis Renzulli Nearly 150 of the 130 members of the California Democratic Party's executive committee have signed a letter in opposition to the decision by the party's Unity Reform Commission to remove rules about abortion access at the state level.
