I'm trying to make a web application that uses a python script to create a website. the python script calls an html file, which calls a css file which calls the javascript file, which in turn calls a function in the main function. The main function is supposed to do all the registering of variables and the rest of the stuff. The problem is, the variable'myWebsite' is set to None inside the html file. So why does it not set the variables in the main function? Here's the html file: My website My website This is the homepage. The python script:

#!/usr/bin/env python
#-- coding: utf-8 --
import os
import sys
website = None
def main():
    global website
    if
