Drive Histogram X64

☒ The reason I made this widget was I needed to figure out which folders were taking up a lot of space on my hard drive. This widget does exactly that. It will give you a histogram of the amount of space in each folder and it recursively scans all the sub-folders so you can tell where all that used space is coming from. You can even export the data to a spreadsheet if you want to manipulate it further. The data is sorted by size, and the bars are color-coded to match the folder (blue for photos, green for documents, etc). There's even a handy-dandy scrolling bar on the side so you can quickly navigate through the folder hierarchy. That's right, you can literally drag-scroll your way through the folder hierarchy. ## What's New In?

Drive Histogram will reveal exactly where all that used space on your hard drive is. This Widget recursively scans your hard drive and displays a bar graph of size information so you can see how much space each folder and its subfolders take up. Useful when you need to free up space but you don't know what's taking it. Visual style inspired by the default Konfabulator widgets, but I pixel-pushed it myself. Feel free to remix this widget for your own purposes. Requirements: ☒ Yahoo Widget EngineQ: Multiple different values in one array? I have three different values that I need to save to a MySQL Database, I have each in an array that gets passed to a PHP script that inserts them into the database. $query = "UPDATE test SET user_id = '{$_SESSION['id']}', user_name = '{$_SESSION['name']}', user_age = '{$_SESSION['age']}' WHERE id = '{$_SESSION['id']}' "; How do I make this do three values at once? A: You need to use in_array() function. $array = array(5,5,5); if(in_array(5,$array)) { echo "5 was in array"; } else { echo "5 was not in array"; } A: If you want to avoid an IN() statement, you can use a for loop: $values = array(1,2,3,4,5); for($i=0; $i# Downloading Things ## Downloading Nats recommends
