Convert PCL printer-specific output to a Portable Document Format (PDF) file. Information can be communicated to people in a variety of ways. One popular way to communicate information to people is through visual media. Visual media, such as images, can be used for a variety of purposes including communicating information to people. For example, visual images can be used to communicate information about a person, item, or action. Traditional ways of communicating information with visual images have not provided a convenient way for people to communicate information visually to people without traveling to the location of the person or item. Visual images can be transmitted to a recipient by communicating information to a person, and having the person physically deliver the image to the recipient. This has been done, for example, by a postal service, having a person travel to a person's home and hand-deliver an envelope containing an image. Although this can be a convenient way to communicate information to people, it is not always possible for the recipient of the image to receive the image at the time and location it is communicated to the recipient.
