Photoshop and the Web One of the most lucrative uses of Photoshop is to design websites. Because Photoshop is such a robust application, as well as being the most popular, it is used on nearly every website. The design of a website is a fairly sophisticated matter. The key to a site that is easy to navigate is that it has large clear buttons and a simple, clean design. If the buttons are too small, users may struggle to find the information that they need. If the site is over-designed, users may struggle to find the important information. For example, a cluttered layout may make it hard to find content on a blog, and a complex navigation system may be a turn-off for users. Main subject: A website's main subject should be easy to identify. Many web developers use
