Torus is a beautiful game that will keep you amused for hours if you want to enjoy a special kind of tetris in your Opera browser. Features: Multiplayer A beautiful, arcade-style tetris game for Opera. Easy to learn. Easy to play. Nice! Solid gameplay. Interactive leaderboards. Sound effects. Handy / Cool: You can play as long as you want, thanks to unlimited amount of lives. Cool: You can keep the "failed" tile just under the bottom row. It would be cool if we could make it go faster. Needs: If you are really good, you can break through the wall by moving the blocks in such a way that all them touch. But it's harder than it sounds and you can't just push the blocks and let them go. You need to move them so they cancel out each other and go around the other blocks. I really hope this is the end of the endless revisions. I mean, I understand the difficulty of developing a Tetris game without any idea how the public wants to play the game, but I think there are far too many changes and improvements that have gone on and just got worse. The level pack is a perfect example of what not to do, I can't even explain it. And on top of it, it's so intrusive and loaded it even makes the whole game unplayable. Before the first version, the game was very slow, wasn't exactly tetris, but it felt like tetris. Then the level pack appeared. And it's just not a level pack, it's the whole game! It's never going to end. And not only do I have to endure it, but everyone has to! Why do I have to buy level packs when they are not necessary? Also, it's obvious that the level pack was made with no regard to the game's style and structure. I can't even get into that wall of improvements anymore. I'm just going to put my opinions out there and just make a constructive criticism thread about it. But I won't do it for a while. Hey everyone!Torus has been here for a while, but has been now archived. However, the main thread where everything happened is still here and can still be found and read! I don't know how long this thread will stay open, but I will be updating it with all the changes and fixes to the game. That is what I wanted to hear... I know that you were so frustrated with it, but I'm just glad that you can breathe now. All I can say is that I hope you're not upset by all the criticism because you put in so much work on it and it just seems like it's no longer the work of a normal, regular dev but just some big company.
