Q: How can I append the contents of a ListBox to a StringBuilder? I am using the following piece of code to get each item from a ListBox in my WPF application: List selectedValues = new List(listBox.SelectedItems); I then use the string in a variable called "selectedPath" then use a StringBuilder method to save the information to a file: StringBuilder b = new StringBuilder(); b.Append(selectedValues.ToString()); b.AppendLine(); b.AppendLine(selectedPath); However, when I run the above in my method, it saves out nothing... What am I missing? A: SelectedItems is a List - as such, there is no ToString() method on it. You can either SelectListItem.ToString() or cast it to List like this: selectedValues = listBox.SelectedItems.Cast().ToList(); A molecular and crystallographic analysis of the role of residues Asn101 and Asp103 in substrate binding by rat kidney fructose-6-phosphate,2-kinase. Fructose-6-phosphate, 2-kinase is a unique enzyme that catalyzes the transfer of a 2-phosphoryl group from ATP to fructose-6-phosphate to form fructose-2, 6-bisphosphate. Asn101 and Asp103 in the rat kidney isozyme of fructose-6-phosphate,2-kinase, which have a role in catalysis, have been identified as an interacting moiety in the substrate-binding site and are thought to stabilize the transition state complex. The crystal structure of the rat kidney isozyme of fructose-6-phosphate,2-kinase has been refined to 1.30 Å resolution, with a final R factor of 0.183. The results demonstrate that Asn101 and Asp103 are part of a conserved cluster of residues that is used by this enzyme to catalyze phosphoryl transfer.Q: Exponential explosion? I have the

When mammalian cells are subjected to ionizing radiation or other stresses, they trigger a cascade of intricate pathways that transform them into a population of progenitor/stem-like cells possessing the ability to self-renew and give rise to the differentiated cells that make up the cell population. Once the damaged population is restored to totipotency, repaired DNA can take on a new, or "stabilized," mutation rate, bringing about changes in the epigenome that may potentially lead to cancer. This review traces the path of recovery from an oncogenic insult by discussing how epimutations may be repaired, emphasizing our knowledge gained from induced pluripotent stem cell models. We conclude by discussing the therapeutic potential of applying this information to the clinic, including the use of oncogenic and other stresses to spur the production of immortalized, fully reprogrammed induced pluripotent stem cells for regenerative medicine. great.
