This course is designed to help students prepare and gain ethics knowledge, understand the meaning of academic ethics, and learn how to use the Internet with proper caution. It is based on a text book titled "Ethics Beyond High School", written by Amy Waddel and Ron A. Goudreau. This text is used in many colleges and universities across the country. The course also offers instruction on how to gain access to many news and online sources, as well as how to build a search engine index to be used in a search engine to find out a topic of interest on the Internet. Ethanol Corn Ethanol is a carbon-neutral fuel that is about 25 percent less polluting than gasoline and is produced by fermenting corn stalks. Currently, three major U.S. ethanol producers are using corn for production: the Archer Daniels Midland Company, D.E. Shaw, and Borenstein. [2] Currently, ethanol accounts for between 2 and 3 percent of the U.S. transportation fuel production. E85 gasoline is labeled with the ethanol percentage on the pump, and E10 is labeled with the ethanol percentage plus a 10 percent stamp showing that it is higher ethanol than gasoline. [3] Over 13 billion gallons of ethanol were consumed in 2005. However, less than 2 billion gallons were produced in that year, leaving the United States with an estimated deficit of 3.5 billion gallons of ethanol. [4] In late 2006, President Bush signed into law the Renewable Fuels Standard Act. This legislation requires the government to increase the annual amount of ethanol that is added to gasoline to 36 billion gallons by 2007, 42 billion gallons by 2010, and 16 billion gallons in 2022. [5] Corn-Based Ethanol The ethanol production process uses a natural fermentation process to produce ethanol from corn. Corn stalks are soaked in water to stimulate the corn crop's growth and then are stuffed with raw material. In the process of producing ethanol, these raw materials are broken down into smaller particles through a series of enzymes. It is these enzymes that perform the fermentation. Some corn is grown to be used as animal feed, and some corn is grown for human food. [6] The types of corn used for ethanol production are dry-toasted, 77a5ca646e

The Microsoft ASP.NET TimeZone Control allows you to specify a set of one or more time zones, along with corresponding daylight-saving dates, that will be applied to the system clock when the page loads. Note that you can create a Control of its own and have it use a new instance of the TimeZone class for each control, but it is generally best to create a single Control on the page and have it apply its time zones to all the other controls on the page. The ADO.NET Data Provider for .Net Framework 2.0 (ADO.NET 2.0) offers an extension of the ADO.NET Framework that enables developers to create data-oriented applications. The provider is similar in functionality to the ADO.NET Provider for SQL Server. The ADO.NET 2.0 provider for .Net framework provides you with two classes for connecting to databases and retrieving information. The ProviderFactory class allows you to create custom ADO.NET Data Provider classes based on your existing data access code. The DataSet class enables you to create customized data-driven applications by providing an object-oriented data access and data management framework for the .Net Framework. The ADO.NET 2.0 provider for .Net framework is not a replacement for the ADO.NET Framework, it is an alternative data provider that is very similar to the ADO.NET Provider for SQL Server. In ADO.NET 2.0, the provider introduces several new features such as DataSet. In this chapter, you will explore some of the new features and benefits that the ADO.NET 2.0 provider for .Net framework provides over the ADO.NET Framework. The MSILGen.NET assembly is part of the .NET Framework. It allows you to generate MSIL, the common intermediate language used to represent computer programs in .NET Framework. It can generate
