Learn more about how to get what you want in life and live the life you want. Learn more about how to get what you want in life and live the life you want. Â I still had the energy needed to go home and get three more hours of sleep. Â After the second one, I knew that I needed to rest A

(even though I was still a little drunk) and three hours later I slept the next day. Â I got the most of the second night, but not as much as the first. Â If I had not had two nights of rest before the trip, I would not have had the same amount of energy. Things that I was thankful for that I got to experience again: Â The sunrise coming up over the mountains. Â Cooler morning temps than I expected. Â Getting checked into the hotel and seeing my unit. Â Taking showers. Â Getting my driver's license back. Getting to get my first taste of Mexican food. Â Seeing my family. Â Looking at my watch at the actual time of my destination. Thinking back to that moment. Starting the car and going over the bumpy road over the bridge. Going through the second checkpoint at the border crossing. Seeing the misty mountains in the distance. Â Thinking about the trip and how the trip felt. Â The anticipation of what I had left and where I was going. Â Not knowing what I was going to feel when I arrived. Â Not knowing when I was going to get there. Â Thankful that I knew that I would get there eventually. During my first turn on the bridge that crossed the river, I had to turn the car around. Â I had trouble finding the right turn. Â I had to stop and circle back around. Â I found the last turn and made it, but had to stop and get my bearings. Â It was very cloudy that day and I had seen this area before. Â I knew where I was and where I was going. I asked my driver a question to see if he knew how to tell time from his watch, and he replied that he didn't know. Â I asked him what time it was and his reply was, "Three AM." Â I said, "Okay, three AM means that you only have another hour and twenty
