The key is an application which only opens a URL in a web browser and then allows the user to input a 16 digit number. When the user inputs a number that is greater than 999 (e.g. 1300), the application will generate another random number between 1 and 999 and add it to the previously entered number. The outputted number is the final result. For instance, entering 123 and another random number of 1 will result in a final number of 124. This trick is done so the attacker can't easily predict the final number by searching in the application. At the end of the application's execution, the application stores a key on the computer.
