Comparison of serum levels of free and total galactomannan: Impact of cut-off value, assay method, and geographic region in patients with invasive aspergillosis. Galactomannan (GM) assays are used to diagnose invasive aspergillosis (IA). The level of serum GM is influenced by many factors, such as the GM assay method and cut-off values. This study aimed to assess the influence of assay method, cut-off values, geographic region, and anti-fungal therapy on the serum GM levels in patients with IA. Forty-three patients with proven IA and pre- and post-GM-assay records were included in the study. The GM levels determined by the Platelia™ Aspergillus enzyme immunoassay (EIA), the Platelia™ Fungi-EIA, and the Platelia™ Aspergillus diagnostic kit (DiaSys Diagnostica) were compared. The median post-GM-assay level was significantly higher compared to the pre-GM-assay level in the Platelia™ Fungi-EIA ( $P=0.039$ ), but not in the Platelia™ Aspergillus EIA ( $P=0.07$ ) or in the Platelia™ Aspergillus DiaSys kit ( $P=0.86$ ). In addition, the median post-GM-assay level was significantly higher than the median pre-GM-assay level in the Platelia™ Fungi-EIA ( $P=0.007$ ), whereas no significant difference was observed in the Platelia™ Aspergillus EIA ( $P=0.27$ ) d0c515b9f4
