Post navigation Bistro 98 : Tip for tourists Discovering Bistro 98, my first French restaurant, was like finding a jewel. After two years of learning the French language, I had just stumbled upon a place that turned me on in a very intense way. My girlfriend and I made a date to dine there and when I saw the restaurant, I nearly cried. It was magic! At the time, I had no much French besides a few words I had picked up on the streets. I was sure that I had never been to a place like that in Paris. In my little village in the middle of the French countryside, a few people speak French. Not even french fries, for fuck sake! But this place didn't look French to me... I was fascinated. My girlfriend and I were already late when we got there, so when we had placed our order, we took a quick look around. We were not disappointed. I must tell you that the bouillabaisse was a revelation. For a French chef, it was superb. You could not have imagined a dish that could turn a good meal to a great meal. I know that good food should be enjoyed. If you are travelling, make sure to choose the best in order to have the best memories. All the dishes were delicious, especially the crème brûlée and the mocha. The price was really affordable. I didn't hesitate to come back to dinner more than once. But I had to learn a few things on my next visit. I had learned quite a bit by then, but I discovered a lot of things on this trip. It was also the only foreign restaurant in which I felt I knew everything that was going on in the kitchen. In most of the French restaurants I had been, there was no cooking going
