It was barely a surprise to anyone that the Batmobile would feature in episode four of The Batman, but when it was revealed that the car was likely to feature in a confrontation with Bane, it seemed that the wait would be interminable. And it was even longer than that. Over at ToplessRobot, we've spoken to the man who will be driving that very model of car in the series, stunt man Harry Foster. He revealed that the car was initially just going to be a stunt set for the series and to be used to drive around Gotham for a few weeks. But the role of the car in the drama grew beyond that of a mere stunt set and as the series went along, it's safe to say that he's been waiting for the call to become the genuine version of the car that we know and love. "Well, I'm sure the pilot, who I've worked with, [is going to] give me a call and say, 'Hey, do you want to be the real one or the one that was lying in the trash?'" he told us. "Because the one that was lying in the trash was taken away by the forensics people." And it was then that the conversation grew serious. "When they approached me about doing the Batmobile, I just said, 'I've got to check with my lawyer,'" he said. "It's one of the most iconic, recognizable products of the 20th Century. They don't make cars like that anymore. And since I'm the only guy who's done a real car chase in a real car, I think they would be foolish not to have me drive it." The word is that filming of the episode has started, so although Foster has been waiting for a while, it's looking like he might get to use the genuine car quite soon. He's currently working on the episode, as you'll be able to see for yourself when it airs on Monday night. The Batman will be available on DVD and Blu-ray from
