It's for people who enjoy editing photos, who like playing around with filters and lights, and who want a concise way to manage their images. It's great for designers and general creative professionals who work with images for graphic design, illustrations, or other purposes. It's essential to learn Photoshop if you're serious about designing content for the web. If you're a graphic designer, you may have already learned Photoshop in school. You're already familiar with the basics of Photoshop—opening, closing, and saving images, as well as about how to crop and edit images for print and the web. If not, you may wonder how you should approach learning Photoshop. Here are some things you should know about the interface and how to

Purification, crystallization and characterization of the enzyme. A procedure for the purification of fructose-1,6-bisphosphatase, the enzyme involved in the primary metabolism of glucose, from plant tissues, is described. The enzyme was purified from wheat (Triticum aestivum L.) roots by the use of ammonium sulphate precipitation, phosphocellulose and heparin-agarose chromatography. On the basis of the results of amino acid analysis of the purified enzyme, its molecular weight is estimated to be 40,000, and its frictional coefficient at 20 degrees C is 2.49 S. The enzyme was crystallized from ammonium sulphate solutions in the  $P2(1)2(1)2(1)$  space group using the hanging-drop technique. The crystals, which appear in 1-2 days at room temperature, are large prismatic octahedrals (length 0.1 mm, breadth 0.05 mm) and diffract to 3.3 Å resolution. The results of electrofocusing confirm that the enzyme has a molecular weight of 40,000. An accurate value for the distance between the sulphate anions was obtained from high-resolution X-ray diffraction data. The enzyme was found to be absolutely dependent on  $\text{Co}^{2+}$  ions for activity and of  $\text{Mg}^{2+}$  ions for optimal activity. Fructose 1,6-bisphosphate in concentrations up to 20 mM is stable against hydrolysis. The standard free energy of hydrolysis is -10.2 kJ/mol, indicating that the reaction proceeds via an enzyme-bound aldehyde-NADP+ ion complex.
