There is a great deal of information about the manuscripts of "Little Fire" or "Fires Of The Middle Ages." Most histories of the month of April end with the unexplained disappearance of Martin Luther King, Jr. and Martin Luther King, Jr., and the 'Fires Of The Middle Ages' include an obvious discrepancy. "Little Fire" or "Fires Of The Middle Ages" was written on scraps of paper gathered by a young boy in the late 1960's. He said he was taking them to school because his teacher had asked him to do so. At the very end of the book are the words: "John Cleveland Williams herewith gives his thanks to those who read "Little Fire" or "Fires Of The Middle Ages," and if they wish, the author would be very willing to receive a donation from them." "Fires of the Middle Ages" is the thirteenth of forty-two poems in the collection "Little Fires In the Churchyard" that were written by a young man identified only as John Cleveland Williams who called himself "the Dark Man." This collection is a sequel to "Birthday Boy And The Soul Of Christmas, To Which is Added The Story of Martin Luther King, Jr. and Martin Luther King, Jr." Many of these poems were compiled by W. DeLand Shawyer and published in 1968 (USA) by Emerson Books as "Birthday Boy And The Soul Of Christmas." In subsequent years, some of them were published by Amherst College in its Amherst Writing Series. All of them are now published in the same volume as "Little Fires In The Churchyard."
