The Dynamic Player Trajectories feature has been improved to improve player fatigue, and fatigue is now reflected in more realistic movement patterns, such as player body movement slowing during physical, tactical and mental fatigue. The off-the-ball system lets you call for players to come closer to you by holding a “P” button or by pressing the “Run” button on the D-Pad. It uses a new signature system to control the timing of players’ run up, as well as to see if a player is about to step over the ball (for a counter-attack) or not (for a central defensive or defensive play). The new Dynamic Tackles introduce more athletic touches on players’ bodies while players are tackled. The Dynamic Free Kicks have been reworked to prevent players from just flicking the ball in the air for a free kick. Instead, you can play a goalkeeper in a goal, use your run up to direct a free kick and bring down a player who has already handled the ball. A new signature system tracks players’ movements to understand how they move when they are tired or dazed, and they change their behaviour accordingly. Playmakers’ attacking runs slow, their finishing is not as precise, and they lose a step off the ball when tired. New contextual cues, such as the speed of the ball or the number of touches, appear to make timing less important when a player is tired. New Defenders add new levels of intensity and agility to counterattacks on the break, and more intensity to the defensive play in the centre. New

Intentions highlight players' more proactive behaviours, and contextual cues enable players to communicate with each other more effectively on the pitch. Players are challenged with new tactical situations, and the new "Manager Carousel" informs them of the best counter-tactics for each situation. There are new additional depth options for tactical set up. New coach orders enable players to change their coach orders. Vibration feedback has been improved to make the game feel more responsive. Players now turn to their right or their left when they initiate a run. New Player Trajectories have been added for more realistic fluid movement, which enable players to dribble around an opponent, and to free up more running space. Players are now more unpredictable and unpredictable. D-
