My question is simple, but don't know how to tell if there are enough samples to be able to determine the difference between the two plots. The plots are both based on time series data for weekly population in Belgium for 2010. The data is from: I want to know if the two plots are statistically different. The plots are as follows: I used the non-parametric estimate of the confidence interval for a difference in proportions to determine what the confidence interval for confidence level was for a difference in proportions. Thus the confidence interval for differences in proportions was where: but I wasn't able to calculate the confidence interval for a difference in proportions for the times series data, instead for the actual data it was 0.9746127. Am I correct in thinking this means that there is more than enough data to reach a significant difference? Thanks for any help. A: Yes, there is enough data. 1cdb36666d

Friday, March 21, 2016 Bracelet Friday I was created this bracelet in March 2013, on my way to being on the cover of the October 2013 issue of BEEJ Magazine. Here are the steps to making this bracelet. My bracelet is made out of wood beads, hemp cord and acrylic. It is reversible. I used 9 mm wooden beads and 6 mm wooden beads. The backs of the beads are wood not painted and you can make this bracelet with any wood beads. You can find all the beads I used on my website Step 1. Cut the wood beads in half, add glue, and make a knot in a jump ring. Step 2. Cut the hemp cord in half. Then use a needle and string the half beads onto the cord. Step 3. Tie a knot between the first and the second beads with a piece of hemp cord, when the knot is done tie the cord just below the knot. Step 4. Tighten the knot. Hemp cord is natural, rope like material that is stronger than steel, and lasts up to 30 years. It is also non-toxic and one of the most environmentally friendly materials that exists. Step 5. Take the first half of a cord, go through the second half, and make a knot with the last piece. Step 6. Tighten the knot. After you have finished making the bracelet. Take it apart and string the beads you didn't use onto the cord as the last step. You can buy hemp cord at any craft store, or visit for more ideas of making a bracelet. I love this bracelet, and I've worn it everyday since making it. I hope you love it too.) #ifdef WIN32
