from linux how do you find the line number in the calling command for your call record files? Last Updated on June 5, 2020 by haveclotheswilltravel I thought I'd take a short break from all things swatches and get one last day of wedding planning in before summer officially gets here! But I'm still planning and organizing a big photoshoot for my dress and now I'm getting an iPhone XS Max and want to add some more accessories. What better way to start this than with my can't-miss elephant print (in case you can't tell, I'm absolutely obsessed with my white Elephant paper)! My iPhone XS Max and Elephone paper are two of my favorite accessories. It's so easy to whip out my iPhone and use it to snap pics, apply face filters, and write down notes and ideas. But I decided to also add a water resistant case - specifically the lip color case that comes with the XS Max. After all, it is a super cute color! Plus, it will make my iPhone much more water resistant than it is without it. I also love my Elephone paper. It's a very useful case if you like using your iPad or computer for note taking – or want to carry around a notebook. I also like that it snaps easily onto my iPhone so I can carry around a notebook or journal with me. Have you purchased or are looking to purchase an iPhone XS Max or Elephone paper? Or does the case not jive with your style? If so, what do you use? (I'm so curious!) I also thought I would share this tutorial (since it's been a while since I posted anything DIY – that's why I do this twice a month, you know!). I've shared this tutorial with lots of people and one of the neatest things about it is that it can be adapted for any iPhone case, just keep in mind that it doesn't match all iPhone cases. DIY iPhone XS Max and Elephone paper *note – I'm linking all of these products and services to Amazon. That being said, I do earn a small commission on anything purchased via my Amazon link. This helps support the blog and keeps things running smoothly. All opinions are still my own and I never share anything that doesn't fit my style. I d0c515b9f4
