I wrote a function in DB2 to insert test data and it's working correctly. However, I would like for the function to return the type of the input parameter (e.g. int, varchar(MAX)) like the other functions for e.g. dblink (Is there a way to do this in db2? I'm thinking maybe it's not possible but I was wondering if anyone knows if there's a way to do this.

A: First of all, in Db2 LUW 8.1 or later, we could use db2column() function for get a column type of a value: select db2column('myvalue') from dual; with like that

I could get a column type of myvalue: bytes, "longvarchar" (LONGCHAR), "text", "integer", "double", "float" (FLOAT), "decimal", "varbinary", "numeric" (NUMERIC) For your function, I think you should set a column type of your input parameter via parameter datatype: create or replace function yourfunction(inp parameter datatype =) 648931e174
