Much of it has been written from a journalist perspective. To a man, most of them seek to portray the league as being in the wrong, or the league doing something horribly wrong. An NFL player is a chunk of meat put into a quasi court system to solve legal disputes between him and the league. The system is rigged, in other words, and so the general consensus is that the players are the victims. I'm sure if you ask, almost every player would say the same thing. But if you dig a little deeper, you'll find there are a lot of things the NFL does to make sure the players are players, and the messier a player's actual issue with the league is, the better. "The NFL has been in a constant state of flux, going to court over the last few years and not having it go in their favor," said Heath Brown, a trial attorney based in Washington, D.C. "All this court stuff is incredibly expensive and a lot of times the workers' comp cases
