The effects of topical application of a soft lithographic preparation for galactomannan on the stria vascularis and the vestibular aqueduct of guinea pigs. The effects of topical application of a soft lithographic preparation for galactomannan to the vestibular end organs of guinea pigs were examined. Firstly, to examine the effects on the stria vascularis, the ears of guinea pigs were injected with the same solution as the soft lithographic preparation for galactomannan with Evans blue dye, then the membranous labyrinths were dissected after the 2-week application of the preparation. As a result, the outer surface of the stria vascularis was severely damaged in each of the three experiments, and a considerable number of interstitial cells were decreased by the damages in the experiment with the application of the compound for 72 hr. Secondly, for the examination of the effects on the vestibular end organs, the auditory ossicles and the inner ears were dissected after the application of the preparation for 16 hr. As a result, it was shown that the membranous labyrinths, including the end organs, were not injured in the 3 experiments. In addition, the inner and the outer surfaces of the cochlea were observed under scanning electron microscopy. As a result, no remarkable injuries were observed on the outer surfaces of the cochlea and the organ of Corti.
