No fracking, no orca landings: the WA Government will ban all development in the Kimberley after the state's Chinese investors made a $200 million offer for the Surat Diamond Mining (SDM) Trust. Premier Colin Barnett made the announcement at a joint press conference with state Treasurer Mike Nahan, Premier of Western Australia, Colin Barnett, and SDM Trust Board chair, Richard Mead. Mr Barnett confirmed WA would not sign any more mining contracts after a $200 million (€146 million) public offer made by a Chinese-Australian consortium. A previously-declared $400 million deal to buy SDM was rejected by WA's Foreign Investment Review Board in December after two years of political and public scrutiny. The consortium made a fresh offer but Mr Barnett said it was not enough to make WA "better off". The deal in question is being submitted to the Funder's Labor State/Federal Review body with a heavy focus on Perth. Last month, Premier Colin Barnett told the Sunday Times: "I think a number of people will breathe a sigh of relief that we're not signing up contracts for mining. "We are comfortable that we are not going to sign up any mining contract in the next decade." Both Mr Barnett and Mr Nahan say the new public offer is not in fact a new mining contract, but a minimum bid that could be raised should the Commonwealth Government fail to offer a $185 million investment guarantee. "Our position is we will not be signing any deals in the next five years, and that's a pretty important caveat to the announcement we have made," Mr Nahan said. "It is a two-year moratorium, after that we will be looking very carefully. "We are looking carefully at the investment proposal the Government put forward, we're looking carefully at the investment proposal made by the mineral resources department to the Funder in the last 12 months." The Government could choose to pay out $185 million to the mining industry or
