I can use this code in the viewDidLoad: UIApplication.SharedApplication.IdleTimerDisabled = true; Or I can send the use a background location request, but it's very costly (more than 10 seconds). Is there a way to stop all timers from running and keep the app running until it is killed by user? Note: I know I can add the iOS application capability capabilities, but it was very costly. A: There are no methods to disable all timers and keep your app running in background, you can only disable each timer by using: UIApplication.SharedApplication.IdleTimerDisabled = true; So, if you want to keep your app running and disable all timers, you can use the following approach: When you create the timer, you can set a DateTime with the date when your app will be inactive. When the event happens you can send an event to your app, that will tell you that you need to set the timer date to today. Then you can update the date to the current date, update the timer property and do some stuff. When your app enters in background, just do the same, check the current date, update the date of the app and make the rest of the work. I'm doing the same for an app called TaporTalker. You can check some details about the app here. Hope it help! YouTube is the world's largest

Net profit dropped from RM10.7 billion to RM9.1 billion, following lower income from its business and other sources, as well as a drop in capital gains. This included a drop in income from interest and debt collection, which fell by 8 per cent yoy to RM8.9 billion. Asset quality continued to weaken, with the loan loss provision rising to RM3.7 billion from RM2.7 billion, while net charge-offs came in at RM1.6 billion, up from RM1.3 billion. "While financial markets remain volatile and credit conditions continue to tighten, we remain confident in our strategy and financial strength to mitigate the potential impact of our exposure to the sector. We are unwavering in our commitment to providing attractive value-added services," OCBC Bank senior director and group CEO Tan Sri Dr Mohd Amail Mohd Yusoff said in the earnings press release. Meanwhile, its senior vice president of personal and business banking S.A. Salleh

Exe vs Games - Trojan Generic Name: Chakra1.exe Type Name: Trojan / Win32 / Generic 1,1,629 bytes. Source: Command and Control (C2) network. Date: Tue, 15 Jan 2013 21:47:10 GMT Excerpts of the TECHNOMORPHOSIS_2013-01-15.txt file for this malware: Version: TK42-CN.V1.0.0. I tried to remove all the viruses I could using antivirus software, a system checker, and of course in-depth researches, without success in any of them. My final result was to format my computer in the hope that, when re-installed, I can clean my virus and other malware. Unfortunately, the format didn't work as I was expecting so. I had to return to my computer with the following result: I was only able to reboot my computer once. The next attempt, I simply had a hard time to find my way to a disk with my files. I chose the "Recovery Mode" option in the "RestorePoint" screen, a partition that contains all my files. During the process, there was a message saying that Windows couldn't load up. After the process was done, I was only able to reboot once, and everything was back to the status quo ante. With no loss of data.Q: A bijective map between semistable and stable sheaves preserves slopes Let X be a curve over \mathbb{C} . I am trying to follow this note of Atiyah where he says that if $f: E \rightarrow F$ is a bijective map between semistable sheaves over X then the slopes of E and F will be equal. This follows from the fact that $\mu_X(\mathcal{L})$ is an isomorphism between the Néron-Severi group \mathcal{K}_X of X and the space of global sections of the Néron-Senarive sheaf \mathcal{L} , but I don't see how one should get there in terms of the slopes. Any help will be appreciated. A: Here is a quick outline of the argument for the somewhat easier case where X is a smooth curve, $\mathcal{L} = \mathcal{O}(L)$
