3. However, you'd probably have to tell me more about your system to actually get the help I could provide. A: I don't know if it's exactly this option, but I can suggest some common usage that might be related to your file types. I use the software called MaxMSP which provides similar software, but the feature is free for non-commercial usage. There is a snipping window in MaxMSP. With the snipping window, you can only select a portion of a video or audio file. You can also do other post-editing operations. There are several other more featured editing software such as Fruity Loops, Ableton Live or even Photoshop. Some key features you can try for editing your video: Selecting Multiple Frames Snipping Frames Trimming Upgrading Video Frames Adjusting Transitions There are plenty of documentation, tutorials, step by step guides and examples online. For more help, you can also try Google. I hope this helps :) A: Magix Samplitude. I've been using this for a long time. It's worth the money. I just keep a MIDI keyboard in my room, so I can adjust everything. I have the basic features of FruityLoops and maybe it makes you more productive as well. Look at the motion track and snap to the beginning of it. You can line up the starts of the clip. Use the scale buttons and the envelope tool to get the right pitch. There are buttons to change the tempo and pan. There's a cool timeline that you can rearrange, and a preview window as well. There are several utilities you can do before or after you make a song. There is a Finale factory option and other cool things. Timing and more are provided for you, so you don't have to have all of that down, but it might help you get over this hump. ^-1^ for the cationic PAMAM dendrimer series (d)
