Most of this is the same. Enterprises do not change names in order to avoid scandal, for example, they do not change the name of a company just because it was a monopoly, or that the company bankrupt and the new one has been created with a different name. Therefore, because the actual Brazilian company has changed its name, to many Brazilian citizens, because the magazine is now called "O Estado de S. Paulo". For other citizens, because the name of the magazine is "O Estado de São Paulo" and, as above, this name has been already registered in the Brazilian Register of Patents.

However, most citizens are concerned about the name registered in the RPL. The name "O Estado de S. Paulo" was registered for a new publication in 1997. The name of the former publication of the now defunct "O Estado de São Paulo": "Revista Presidente", was changed. Well, the company was the same and the name was changed and the RPL accepted the new name. Therefore, the problem is: Why is the RPL aware of the "Renovatio" series, yet, it is not even aware of the publication with the name "Estado de S. Paulo"? The RPL is not alert to the name, because this is the trademark of "Renovatio" and that does not affect "Estado de S. Paulo"? Or maybe, the RPL is already registered as "O Estado de São Paulo"? To be able to be registered as "O Estado de S. Paulo", the company had to either be annexed to Estado de São Paulo, or the RPL has to accept that the new name is identical to the company that owns the trademark. If it was not already registered as "O Estado de S. Paulo", the "Renovatio" company would have to file in the RPL a request to register the new name as a different trademark. If the RPL decides to grant the request, it has to provide support to the company that wants to register the trademark. No one is at the RPL or belongs to the RPL. It's up to the RPL to decide

Q: Can I "drag" an app from the mac app store to my iMac and use it? I need to use the Adobe Creative Suite CS6 on my iMac. Is it possible to drag the app from the app store and use it? The manual was not very helpful with this. A: I don't have an iMac, but the "Multiple Devices" instructions for the app would be similar. Simply install it, then drag it from the installer to a running OS X. ETA, in 10.10.2, on Mountain Lion, you can drag the app from a store listing into the OS X installer. Q: Cannot get back the favicon for my jupyter notebook I was trying to browse the browser's own favicon which is in %APPDATA%\Roaming\Microsoft\Internet Explorer\Quick Launch\User Pinned\Taskbar, I see that another user had the same problem, but the solution there is not working for me, the only solution I found is opening the "File" menu and select "Open with and choose another application". It seemed to me that they were talking about the tile for the jupyter notebook. The idea is to have the favicon for the jupyter notebook so as to replace the black tile of the jupyter package manager, But the tile is not reflecting the favicon. A: If you search 'favicon' in your search bar, I'm assuming you came across this answer for a similar problem you're facing. Click here to find the jupyter notebook favicon you need. Q: Generalizing the Dirichlet series over finite fields For finite fields  $\mathbb{F}_q$  of odd characteristic the Dirichlet series  $L(s, f)$  for  $f$  a primitive character of order  $h$  is $$L(s, f) = \sum_{m=1}^{\infty} \frac{\Lambda(f)^m}{m^s}$$ where  $\Lambda(f)$  is the minimum period of  $f$  and where  $h \mid q$ . This is proven in Serre's algebraic number theory on page 149 (pg. 150 of volume 2,
