“HyperMotion was designed to really showcase player style and individual abilities,” said Yves Banguet, Managing Director at EA SPORTS. “We’re excited to have the data and expertise to truly harness that energy, so players can truly immerse themselves in a game that matches the intensity of real football.” “The job of the player in FIFA is now more than ever to control the game,” said Sean Ryan, EA SPORTS Lead Producer. “Players can show their skills through a variety of controls, including actions, free kicks, and shooting. We’ve focused on making attacking play feel as fluid as possible, while defense feels more engaging.” “We’re delighted to play a major role in the next generation of football,” said Tom Walls, Lead Gameplay Designer on FIFA 21 and FIFA 22. “The advancements in motion capture technology have opened up a wealth of data which allows us to create our most detailed, best-feeling and most authentic games to date.” A deeper look at the data and the technology that powers FIFA 22 gameplay can be seen in the presentation below: HANDBALL FIFA 22 introduces Handball Technology, which players now control by hitting the ball and reaching into the air. The Control Stick is new to FIFA 22 and allows players to perform typical handball actions to perform tricks, and also receive passes and shoot. The CB button allows the player to block shots from opponents, throw-ins, and free kicks. Crouch and Kneel are new handball actions to perform. 'ASSIST' IS BACK The return of the 'assist' mechanic in FIFA 22 improves the game's playmaking features. With the new assists, players can assist other players to win the ball and become better players. Players now have special 'Assist' passes in the game: a Cross, a Square pass and a Ramp pass. All of these passing options are unique and improve the playmaking in the game. 'Double Lift' A new 'Double Lift' mechanic is added to the game: when the player is forced to pass the ball to an opposing player while the player is on the ground, the player can
