One of the beauties of Cracked was how a very smart person could write any sort of prose. Today if you are new to Cracked you go in thinking of yourself as an author, youre not going to write an article because theres no way youre going to have the time to do it, even if you did. why would anyone ever publish it? thats not how it worked back then. The best part was that they didnt have any problem at all getting writers and youd regularly see excellent words like beautiful, interesting and creative. You werent just writing an article, you were writing in the manner of a really good author. Thats what a Cracked article is. I was asked in advanced if my mum, who was dying of cancer, was going to show up. Since people were willing to give me ludicrous amounts of money, I agreed to do it and it turned out to be the most fabulous experience I ever had. The person on the other end of the phone line was completely trustworthy and kind, and was giving this reward out to help bring a little joy into her life. The money was spread around between family and a good cause. She has told us to email anybody who wants to help. Cracked co-founder Robert 'Big Daddy' Krakowski is one of them. Its all pretty simple: if you give me money, you get your name mentioned. Unrelated: for those of you that can speak/understand Hebrew, my non-profit has partnered with B'Nai Israel for the past year to purchase 5,000 copies of Avraham Avinu, and B'Nai Israel is giving them away to people who donate. Its a translation of the Tanakh into Hebrew, and its a beautiful, gorgeous volume that really can be read by anyone. It just came out.
