This free software utility can secretly monitor all the activities such as keystrokes, mouse movements, text chats, emails, instant messages, browser history, and other important data, without being detected. Users can easily set up the software as an active hidden program, which will record all the data and convert it into a report, which can then be emailed to the parents. Letting kids use computers when they are still in school is not an easy task. Another way to protect the family computer from kids is the dedicated use of parental control software like Revealer Keylogger. The Keylogger software records keystrokes and other important activity, which can be accessed from their own personal email address. Its hard to track the activities of children when they are using computers away from home, but using Revealer Keylogger, parents can easily monitor the activities of their child. The software is easy to install, and does not require much maintenance. The software is available for free, with some of the basic features limited. 5ec8ef588b
