A distributed hash table is a distributed storage system that uses a network of peers and torrents to find files. Each peer maintains a local copy of a set of torrent files in order to function. Each peer stores a hash key into its local network which is used to match the hash keys of torrents found at other peers. Peers will check peers by looking for matching hash keys. It's very similar to the way that bitcoin is stored. It's designed to store similar hashes of files that people are seeking to find. These files are known as torrents. Each has a set of files that it is working on (seeding). BitTorrent is decentralized and peer-to-peer, so if you want to get something saved you have to save it yourself, you don't hand it to someone else. 3. Select a local IP: To conserve on VPN bandwidth and reduce lag, you should use a local IP for your GX Works2

Version 1 Connecting to VPN Test. To connect to a router and set a local IP, follow these steps:[] Access the router's web interface. To do this, go to the web page for your router, select 192.168.0.1 or 192.168.1.1 as appropriate, and then select the interface you want to use. For example, if the interface is connected to the internet, it will be named "wlan0." If the interface connects to a wireless router, it will be named "lan0."[] Open a web browser, and go to 192.168.0.1. If the interface has a web interface, you will see "Default Web Page" listed. Use the web address "192.168.0.1" to open this interface.[] Select "IP settings." For most routers, IP settings are at the bottom of the page. If you can't find the IP settings, call the manufacturer to ask for instructions.[] Select "Static IP." This is usually the first option. If you don't have this option, skip to step 6.[] In the IP settings, type in the IP address that you want to use, or the IP address of the router's local (LAN) network. If the local IP is in the 192.168.0.xxx range, replace xxx with a number 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5, depending on which subnet you are using (see the section The GX Works2 Version 1 Public IP Structure on page 7). If the subnet is 192.168.0.0, replace xxx with 00. If the subnet is 192.168.0.1, replace xxx with 01. If the subnet is 192.168.0.2, replace xxx with 02, etc. Check the "subnet mask" and enter the correct one for the subnet. If the subnet is 192.168.0.1, the mask is 255.255.255.0, and if the subnet is 192.168.0.0, the mask is 255.255.255.0. If the subnet is 192.168.0.15, the mask is 255.255.255.128. If you want to share the internet connection with other devices on the LAN, leave the default field blank. For example, if you are sharing with one other device and another device has a different IP address, you will need to input the IP address of both devices. Check that your router is connected to the internet, and then test your connection. If the test is successful, test your other device to see if it can access the internet. If you do not connect to the internet at this point, skip to Step 6.[] Save the settings.[] Turn off the router. (If you are in the same building as the router, there is a good chance it can be turned off in the router's web interface.) If the router is not in the same building, turn off the router at a remote location such as at the bottom of the driveway or in an unused room, and then turn it back on. Turn the router back on and turn on GX Works2 Version 1 at the same time. If you have a modem with a separate dial tone, turn off the router at the same time.

photo: on your computer, you can set the bittorrent client to download from a particular folder, so it will automatically start downloading from a particular folder whenever it's plugged into a broadband network. alternatively, if you have your broadband router share the connection to other devices, you can set bittorrent to download automatically. photo: most of the time, bittorrent clients are so simple to use that you only need to fire them up once and forget them. this is pretty much the norm for most bittorrent clients, but there are some oddball ones out there. photo: hypermem is an oddball bittorrent client that tries to do more than just download files. its mission is to fix the problems in bittorrent by switching back to the original piece-wise optimization used by the original bittorrent protocol. according to its website, hypermem aims to get bittorrent back to its original state, when it was simpler and more efficient. but it might not be as simple as that, especially if everyone starts using it. photo: dht is a technology that allows bittorrent clients to talk to each other on the bittorrent network, without the need for a central tracker. dht works on the principle of hashing: when you send a piece of data to the network, you also send a hash of that data. if you receive a piece of data that matches the hash that you sent, the two pieces of data are assumed to be the same. this avoids the need for a central tracker and can make the bittorrent network more efficient. but it also means that, if a lot of people start using dht, it might become a problem. 5ec8ef588b
