

Along with her twin brother, Anamika is the co-editor, with Theis Hofer, of the #WhatsGood blog. The blog, which launched this February, highlights ten good innovations that are changing the world and changes what a blog should be. Each day the blog highlights a different innovative good from a diverse group of innovators. Anamika is a member of the Learning Entrepreneurship Lab, a research project at the World Resources Institute looking at how entrepreneurs are engaging with and leveraging technology to solve the world's problems. She also leads a growing cohort of intrepid youth (even younger than her) who are collectively exploring how technology can have enormous positive impact on the lives of marginalized youth across the world. She is also the founder of her own small technology consulting firm Bepath, which she launched in 2009 to help build more sustainable businesses. Their work is often focused on looking at the links between technology, behavior, and sustainability. Anamika is a Certified Sustainability Practitioner (CSP) and Certified Water Steward (CWS) and a founder of Voice for Water. Voice for Water is a research and advocacy initiative that looks at the ability of technology to help with water access, availability, and quality issues around the world. She regularly advises technology companies on environmental and social best practices. Anamika is also on the board of the Rainforest Action Network. Anamika is an avid blogger who has written a number of articles on a wide range of topics from culture to energy. She has been featured in The Huffington Post, Omdemand, New America Media, Oxygen Magazine, and many more.

Anamika 720p 1080p

Usha Sharma plays Anamikas stern sister Veena, a doctor who is responsible for the crux of the mystery. She visits Anamikas husband Ray, who has to deal with some tough questions, including whether his wife is a fake. Sharma has a great rapport with the audience, even when shes not on screen. When the film works as well as it does in Sharma and Kauls scenes, I found myself wishing the two leads had gotten more screen time. As a doctor, Anamika is always on her toes to provide the best possible care to patients. She believes in providing responsive service to her patients who are put at ease and comfortable when she is available to listen to their healthcare needs. This attributes to both her and her patients happy experiences with her. She wants to improve the health care system and believes physicians need to work with the community to have positive impacts on health. Anamika wants to continue to care for the underserved and vulnerable groups. Anamika is a proud member of the American Association of Physicians Assistants and the AMA. With a Masters degree in Public Policy, Anamika works as a political analyst and advocate for people in diverse communities. Her work focuses on consumer protection, education, affordable healthcare and democracy. Anamika was a 2014 Dean's List and full scholarship recipient at Stanford University. She has received outstanding leadership award from the Indian Association of Physicians Assistants as well as the American Association of Physicians Assistants (AAPA). Anamika has a strong understanding of human rights as well as the problems, and believes healthcare is a human right and people should have freedom to enjoy it. 5ec8ef588b
