Operacion Caballo De Troya John Keel PDF [BETTER]

the significant thing is that keel's message was that the objective of the ufo operators was not to merely gain popular credence by presenting a cuddly, non-threatening face to the public, but that, in fact, the ufo operators want the public to be so confused and befuddled that they would spend their time debating the pros and cons of whether the beings in the ufos were real aliens or not instead of spending their time trying to uncover the secrets of the ufo puzzle. john keel's message was a prophetic one that has been embraced, to a greater or lesser extent, by many researchers and writers ever since. while keel himself could not prove that the alien/et hypothesis was correct (he was hampered by a lack of resources), he did show that those who did not believe in the alien/et hypothesis were chasing their tails. in a way, keel's work was the equivalent of the famous monty python sketch in which two men take a 1-mile walk to prove that they can walk a mile. the first man walks two miles; the second man walks a mile; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 13 minutes; the second man walks a mile in 13 minutes; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 15 minutes; the second man walks a mile in 15 minutes; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 18 minutes; the second man walks a mile in 18 minutes; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 25 minutes; the second man walks a mile in 25 minutes; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 40 minutes; the second man walks a mile in 40 minutes; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 55 minutes; the second man walks a mile in 55 minutes; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 1 minute and 10 seconds; the second man walks a mile in 1 minute and 10 seconds; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 1 minute and 50 seconds; the second man walks a mile in 1 minute and 50 seconds; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 2 minutes and 55 seconds; the second man walks a mile in 2 minutes and 55 seconds; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches. the first man walks 2 miles in 3 minutes and 45 seconds; the second man walks a mile in 3 minutes and 45 seconds; then they walk back to the starting point and check the time on their watches.

but what about the spoon? well, the earth is a big place; the police, the fbi, and the science magazines have probably looked for it to no avail, yet here it is, right in the center of the search area. hmm. however, if we were to search for it again, we would never find it. after all, it's almost impossible to differentiate the location of something that's been lost from the location where it had been found; the latter two locations are almost exactly the same, which, in a way, is sort of weird. here is an excellent keels spacecraft invention article. forget the scientific stuff, its the description of those photos that are so intriguing. i have lots of other things about keel but was just trying to get a basic feel for what he had in the way of publications. i was thinking about keel when i was reading about the 1942 flying saucer sighting that happened at a us airfield in florida in the early morning of december 8th. the captions were given as "dead cow", "night hawk", "death bird", etc. the real captions were that the cow had to be shot or the hawk would be shot and if you watched carefully you could see it in the nighttime (nocturnal) photographs. in the keel book, 'a bright day in september', keel has a quote by a Lt. general of the us air force at the press release announcing the sightings. he is quoted as saying that this type of incident has happened before: "it has happened many times. we have brought world-wide ridicule upon the services by calling the unidentified flying objects aircraft. eventually the public understands that the objects are not airplanes and they do not matter." the moment that it dawned on me that this was not only a plausible account of what happened but that the story had only been clarified is the same time that my mind had the keel-to-me connection! when i read about keels 1952 account, i realized what he was talking about was that of the spaceship encounters. if anyone is interested in any of the above, then there are a lot of sites out there, but of all of the books and websites about keel, i find this one the most complete - called "the keel log". in addition to the urls for specific articles about keel and space travel, there are links to his complete writings. in fact, the entire blog is very interesting, and people from all over the world visit it daily. <http://keellog.blogspot.com/> write back - and that is what i am trying to do!
